Yale’s Interdisciplinary Center for Bioethics hosts an intensive Summer Institute for U.S. and international participants. The Institute is an 8-week immersion consisting of lectures, seminars, site visits, and research exploring bioethical concerns relating to medicine, law, religion, public health, animal ethics, the environment, and business. Symposium for returning students and teachers follows on July 23rd.

Application deadline for U.S. applicants: January 18th, 2016
International students encouraged to apply by November 30th, 2015.

Tuition is $1,800 (undergraduates); $2,200 (law students, medical students, other graduate students, and post-doctoral fellows); $3,200 (professionals).

Housing is available within walking distance for an additional cost.
Course credit is available.

For further information, please see www.yale.edu/bioethics/summer.shtml
Contact Carol Pollard at carol.pollard@yale.edu or (203) 432-6188