Industrial animal agriculture has emerged as one of the most important moral and public health issues of our time. This forum will take a comprehensive look at the costs imposed by animal agriculture on animals, farm workers, the environment, and the public's health.

John Rossi, V.M.D., M.Bioethics
Assistant Professor and
Associate Director of the Program for the Study of Public Health Ethics and History,
Drexel University School of Public Health

April 4 at 4:15 PM
309 Edwards Street, Conference Room
Sponsored by the Yale Interdisciplinary Center for Bioethics and the Rudd Center
If you would like to receive information regarding future animal ethics public lectures, please email: bioethics.center@yale.edu